

Case Study : Clydesdale Plaza

Devise and install a versatile system to give optimum communication facilities in a contemporary space

Client:

Clydesdale Bank

Location:

Clydesdale Plaza,
Edinburgh

Project:

Devise and install a versatile system to give optimum communication facilities in contemporary space

Background:

Clydesdale Bank, part of the National Australia group, undertook a project to upgrade the presentation facilities within the group's Integrated Financial Solutions centres. One such facility is the Clydesdale Plaza boardroom in Edinburgh, where the bank was looking to enhance the appearance of the room while ensuring that the newly installed audio visual equipment did not detract from the room's aesthetic appeal.

Design Considerations:

The main concern was to create a professional appearance, ideal for holding executive business meetings, while simultaneously integrating state of the art audio visual technology. For meetings that did not require presentation facilities, the customer's preference was for the audio visual equipment to be unobtrusive. A unique problem was presented by half of the oval shaped room having a floor to ceiling wood finish which had to remain undisturbed.

Scotia Solution:

Scotia's solution was to install, above the tiled ceiling, two projectors and screens which are automatically lowered and switched on via a wall mounted panel. Two points situated within the room allow the presenter to connect a laptop to the system which also has the capability to show DVDs and videos.

Result:

Scotia provided an elegant solution to the requirement within the Clydesdale Plaza boardroom. The operation of the equipment was kept simple and the visual impact of the technology was kept to a minimum with the screen and projector being lowered into view when used for presentations.

The Clydesdale Plaza Boardroom is a prestigious and notable facility designed to offer the greatest versatility of executive use while retaining the ambience of the surroundings and offering the advantage of visual presentations.
